

EDNA P. MART.

They danced merrily
... around the tree .

Threw him on the floor
and there they left him .

Bless me, what a queer-looking object one of them is . . .

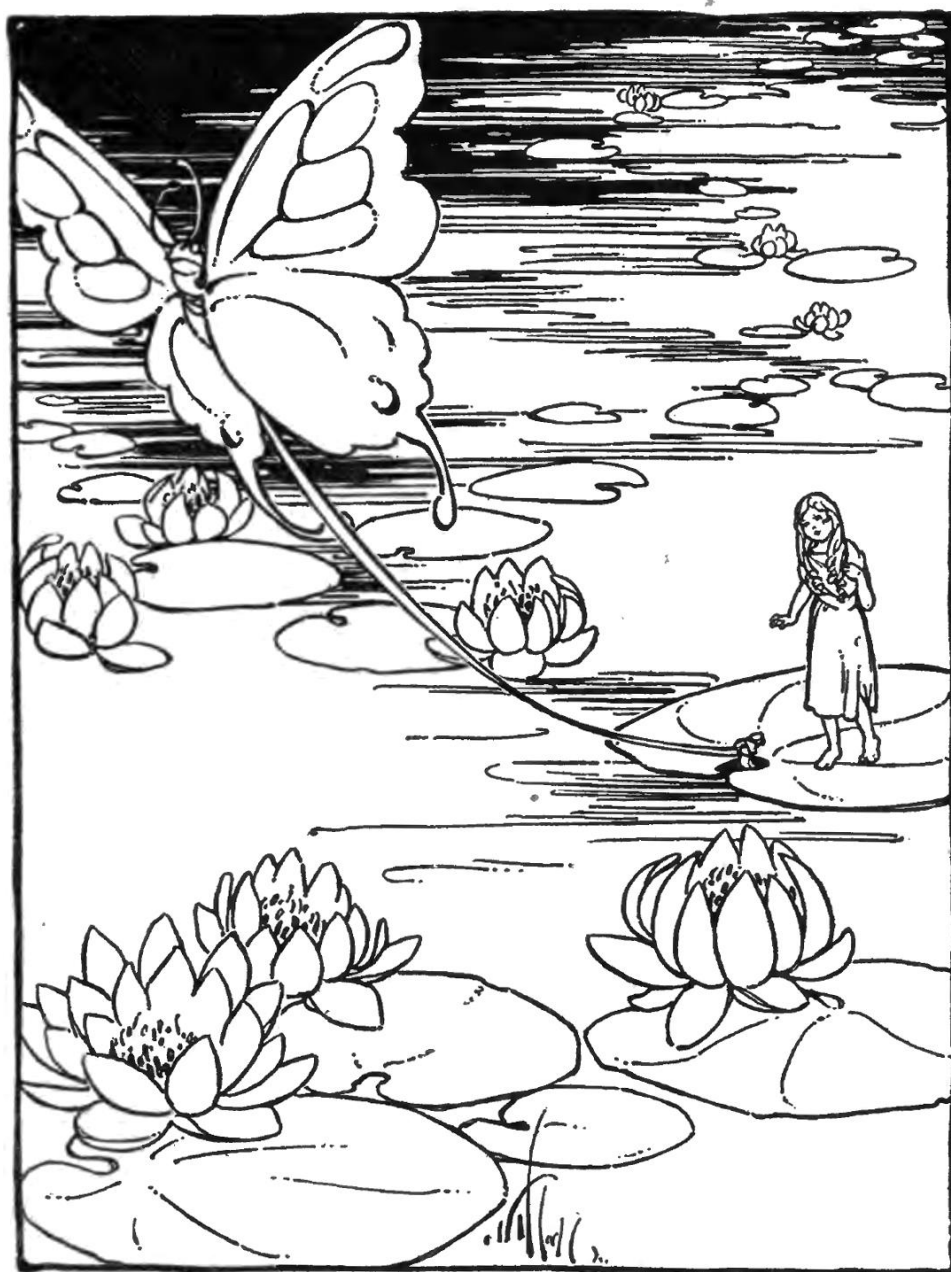

The new one is the most beautiful of all . . .

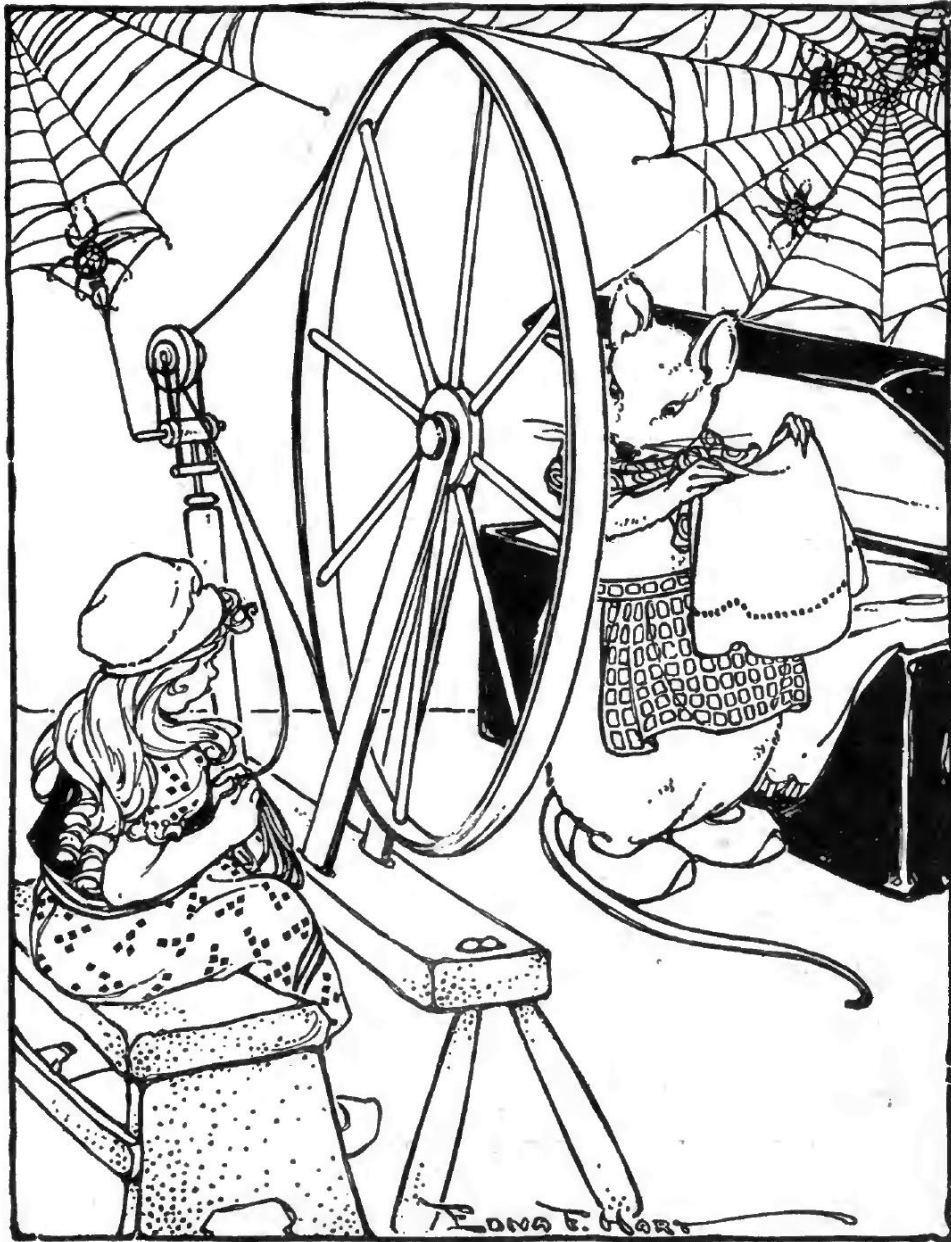

O

n the floor
all the flowers danced gracefully

G

lided on much faster than before

Nothing must be wanting when you are the wife of the mole . . .

Where the light fell upon the wall it became transparent.

The children sat once more
• in the garden
on the roof . . .

There came a very old
woman out of the house

The prince and princess themselves helped her into the coach .

In the center of the lake . . sat the Snow Queen . .
